

Unpredictable nature

Fredrick Leonard

August 20, 2006

Waukegan -- The photo of Nick Foley and his mother on the front page must have rent the heart of every feeling human being.

Because of an attack on a family friend by my next-door neighbor's pit bull, I have spent many hours on the Internet researching pit bulls.

I think that one very critical fact is being overlooked. Of course not all pit bulls are dangerous. But too many of them are.

That's now been proven beyond even a shadow of a doubt. The problem is that we don't know which ones. Why? Because they're so unpredictable. Too many supposedly friendly pit bulls are simply tragedies waiting to happen, as Mr. and Mrs. Foley and their neighbors discovered to their despair.

Copyright © 2006, Chicago Tribune